

Teaching as Medicine

What my heart told me about flow, anxiety, and purpose

GLEB KALININ

THE EXPERIMENT

I wore a heart monitor for 48 hours

ECG-grade chest strap. Every heartbeat.

71k

heartbeats

25

sessions

20h

of data

THE SURPRISE

While teaching 90 minutes my nervous system hit its calmest state ever

29 → 69

resting teaching

Speaking 92% of the time

THE SESSION

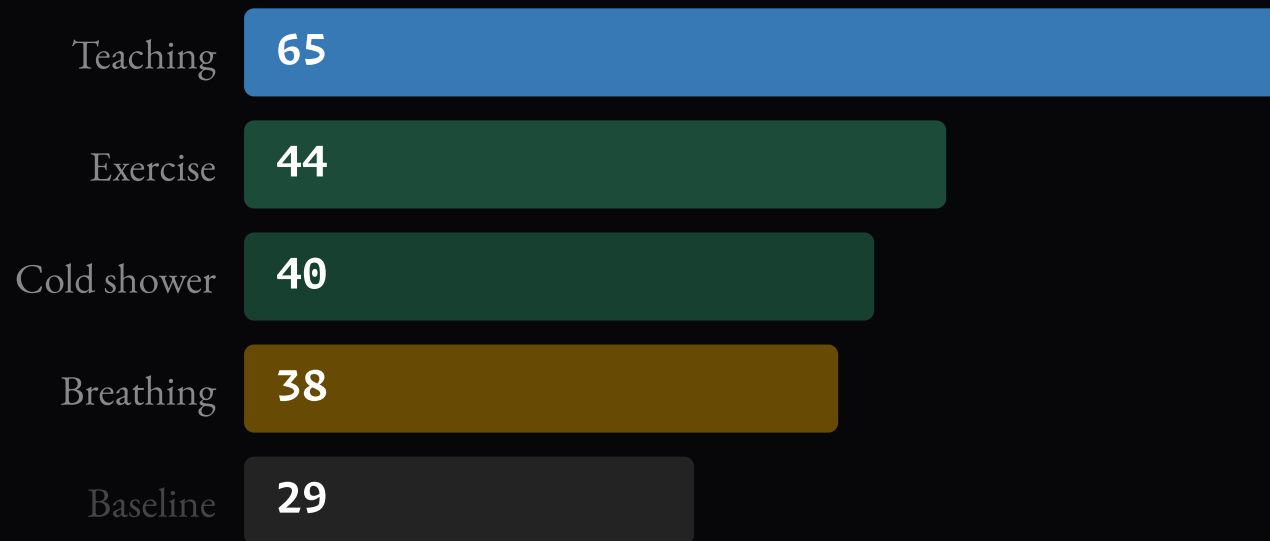

HRV during the lesson

Peak flow at 45–75 minutes · HR dropped to 59 bpm

THE COMPARISON

Teaching beat every health practice

RMSSD (ms) · higher = calmer nervous system

Anxiety doesn't live in the nervous system.

It lives in the gaps between purpose.

Idle

fight-or-flight
without a fight

Engaged

calm, connected,
present

The best anxiety intervention might be doing something that matters so deeply you forget yourself.

What puts you in flow?

That might be your medicine too.

GLEB KALININ · glebkalinin.com